A, B's first movie, was the story of seven brave men who tried to liberate Goa from Portuguese occupation. A also featured C, a Malayalam actor who many years later featured in the Malayalam remake of the film D.

D was released in 2010 and its cast included E, the son of B and F, E's wife. D was directed by G, who shot and released D in multiple languages. H played the hero in one version and the villain I in the other. I was also the name of a song one of the versions of the the movie D.

E and F married shortly after the movie J, which, incidentally, was also directed by G, and chronicled the life of K.

K's son bought L for a whopping $111.9M in 2007. L went on to spend $900,000 on M, their highest bid in 2008. M, however, didn't have the brightest start and slowly faded away; he currently holds a post in Colombo.

L had a poor first year, which was won by N. N was co-owned by O, from Bollywood and P (among others), whose father Q, an Australian-American media mogul owned R, which was recently closed after a public scandal. Q also owns S, an Asian service with the branches India, Greater China, Select, and International. S has many channels, among them a channel meant especially for TV shows in English- T. One of the shows on T is hosted by U, a director and producer. It is believed that U's homosexual tendencies led him to produce the movie V, which stars O, E and W as the main roles. U's latest production to hit the screens, however, is X, which was released in 2012, its title associating with Y, which was supposed to become a major phenomenon. The term X is famous for being used by Z in a poem. Z shared a close relationship with B, and is believed to be responsible for B's acting in A.
